

Branko Glad

Short Bio

Branko Glad is a NYC- based actor, currently living and working in Europe. Branko made his Broadway debut in a revusical[®] So You Wanna Be On Broadway? at Circle in The Square, involving many Broadway legends like Peter Howard, Dennis Buck, Bill Reed and rising Broadway and Hollywood stars like Jonathan Cerullo.

Branko most recently starred as Che in European Tour of Andrew Lloyd Webber's EVITA (the role made famous by Antonio Banderas in EVITA movie with Madonna). Branko's Che thrilled the European audience and quickly brought him the title of one of the most promising young actors in Europe.

Upon arriving to Europe, Branko instantly captured the theater audience with his comical interpretation of Roger in GREASE. Shortly after his success as Roger, Branko got the opportunity to play the lead role, Danny Zucko, in the same production. His playing range – from funny kid Roger to cool and suave dance sensation Danny Zucko – won the critics, and audiences alike, over again.

Branko's other European credits include European Tour of HAIR, two original musicals in which Branko created the lead roles (Asphalt Rose, Three Steps To a Smile) and many roles and guest appearances on TV Shows and Soap Operas ("Balkan Inc.", "Ratkaj's Pride", "Common People", etc.)

Back in the United States Branko made his TV debut in the world-famous TV Show "Sex and The City". He also appeared in "Ed" opposite Burt Reynolds, as well as many films, including the lead role in award winning feature film "A Space of Time (a.k.a. Asymptote)".

Branko's U.S. Theatrical credits include Pippin, The Journey of The Fifth Horse (playing Mitya Zoditch, role originated by Dustin Hoffman), Weill & Brecht's opera Seven Deadly Sins, U.S. Tour: Cinderella (The Prince), and many others. Branko
